Two admit animal cruelty

A Beattyville couple pled guilty Tuesday in Lee District Court to multiple counts of cruelty to animals in the second degree, and were sentenced to serve 120 days.

Deven C. Arnold, 21, and Amy Keith (age not available) of Begley Street both pled guilty to three counts of animal cruelty.

Judge William D. “Bo” Leach sentenced them to 365 days, with them immediately starting to serve 120 days. The remainder of their sentences are probated for two years. During that time they cannot have any other pets, and must not have contact with drugs or alcohol. Each is responsible for paying $840 to the county for the cost of taking care of animals they neglected.

According to the arrest citation, Beattyville Police Chief Greg Brandenburg said that on February 1 he went to the residence to assist animal control. Two dogs were found inside that structure, which was closed and had no windows. The citation says one dog was in “very poor condition. Ribs showing and spine showing. The dog looked very malnourished. Other dog inside building was already deceased. The deceased animal looked very poor and malnourished. There was no water inside building for animals to drink.”

The couple had another residence on KY 52 West, and several other animals were found neglected there on June 26.

According to a note written by Veterinarian Joey Minter who was called to the scene, he found four cats and four dogs, “living in horrible conditions and currently did not have any food or water.”

Keith asked that she be allowed to report to jail this Friday so that she could make arrangements for someone to take care of her children, and so she could see her doctor. Leach denied the request.

Also in district court Tuesday morning, Judge Leach found probable cause to send the case against Derrick Fox to the grand jury.

Chief Brandenburg testified that he, Officer Stuart Morris and Lee County Sheriff Wendell Childers were called to a residence on Hampton Ridge Road on July 4.

A person in the residence said that Fox was threatening several people who had locked themselves in a bedroom.

Brandenburg said that when he arrived, he saw Fox come out of the home and go across the porch carrying a baseball bat. Fox then went around the home and broke the window in the bedroom.

Morris called to Fox while Childers pulled out his taser. Fox saw the officers and started toward Childers, Brandenburg said.

Childers then fired his taser, taking Fox down, but he continued to resist.

Brandenburg said that Fox cursed the officers, told them to kill him and struggled against them.

The officers eventually were able to cuff him and subdue him.

Fox is charged with eight counts of wanton endangerment, criminal mischief and resisting arrest.

The wanton endangerment charges stem from five people in the residence and the three officers. Criminal mischief is for destruction within the home. Brandenburg estimated the damage to be in excess of $1,000.

Leach also called the cases of Michael and Megan Lynch (ages and addresses not given).

They are charged with the alleged fraudulent use of a credit card belonging to a Dorothy Combs. Not guilty pleas were entered, and they are to appear in Owsley District Court this Thursday for preliminary hearings.

Murder trial date set

In Lee Circuit Court Friday, an accused murderer had a trial date set; two defendants failed drug tests, and were sent to jail; and one person asked for the “hammer clause”, which could mean 15 years if she fails it.

Madeline Lykins (1959) is scheduled for trial on November 24 on charges of murder (domestic violence) and tampering with physical evidence. She is accused of the shooting death of her husband last December in their Primrose Lane home.

Samantha Daniel (1994) was in court for a status hearing when Judge Tom Jones ordered a drug test. She faces charges of robbery in the second degree and assault in the second degree.

Daniel reentered the courtroom shaking her head. She had failed the drug test, which found suboxone, benzoids and marijuana.

Jones revoked her bond and sent her to jail.

Tommy Ray McIntosh (1979) was also sent to jail after failing a drug test for suboxone and amphetamine.

McIntosh said he had no idea why he would have failed the test.

Judge Jones, after revoking McIntosh’s bond, said he wanted Probation and Parole to conduct another test to be sure of the failed test.

Rebecca Chambers (1982) entered guilty plea to trafficking in a controlled substance in the first degree in two cases. As part of a plea agreement the Commonwealth is asking for five years, and sentencing is set for August 15.

Chambers asked that she be set free until sentencing, and requested the “hammer clause” until then.

Judge Jones told her that by doing so she would be facing 15 years instead of five, if she violates the conditions of her release. He told her of an Owsley County defendant who is now facing 18 years because he requested and failed the terms of the clause.

Jones approved the request.

The judge had some choice words for Matthew Williams (1978), who was facing sentencing for the charge of complicity in cultivating marijuana.

Williams’ attorney, Charnel Burton, asked that her client receive his two-year sentence probated.

Jones then read from Williams letter. He said that Williams starts by apologizing, and then goes into a “rant” against the arresting police officer.

Williams started to argue with Jones, who told him to be quiet.

Jones then read from a letter from Williams’ mother. She asked that her son be given diversion, and said that if he is as bad as some think he is, he won’t be able to complete it.

“She’s not going after anyone,” Jones said.

He then referred back to William’s letter, where he said that in the grand scheme of things in the world that cultivating marijuana isn’t so bad.

“I’m going to give you an opportunity to fail,” Jones said the Williams.

Area water systems get high marks

Three area water systems have been recognized by the state for consistently producing drinking water in 2013 that exceeded state and federal water quality standards.

According to the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet, Booneville Water, Jackson County Water Association and the Jackson Municipal Water Works were among 61 in the state that did well.

Those 61 are among 149 water treatment plants that participated in the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency’s Area-Wide Optimization Program (AWOP). The program challenges plants to reduce turbidity levels below those required by state and federal regulations.

Turbidity, or cloudiness, of water can be caused by sand and dirt, as well as bacteria and viruses. Partial removal is critical for producing water that is free of dirt and microbes than can cause waterborne diseases.

Road work set in Lee, Owsley

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet has awarded contracts to resurface parts of two roads in Lee County and two in Owsley County.

A $489,246 contract was approved to resurface 1.88 miles of KY 587 and 3.55 miles of KY 2016 in Lee County.

In Owsley County, a contract of $318,561 was approved to resurface 1.34 miles of KY 2024 and two sections of KY 2025 totaling 2.73 miles.

Both projects are to be completed by November 30.

Enterprise article has legs in campaign

An April article in The Beattyville Enterprise continues to be the basis of political discourse in the race for the U. S. Senate between Sen. Mitch McConnell and his Democratic opponent Kentucky Secretary of State Allison Lundergan Grimes.

Grimes has issued a new television ad this week where she is sitting with an out-of-work coal miner discussing McConnell’s statement that he is not responsible for bringing jobs to Kentucky.

McConnell told the Enterprise in a short interview that job development is a state issue; it is not his job.

The senator’s campaign did issue a response to the ad on Tuesday, calling it false.

The campaign also referred back to the Enterprise article, saying that the words were taken out of context.

The Enterprise stands by its article.

“Senator McConnell was asked what he was going to do to bring jobs to Lee County,” said Enterprise Editor Edmund Shelby. “It was one question in a hallway before his appearance at the local community center. That was the context. He said it was not his job, but rather it was a state matter. He did say that he was interested in public projects, but again said that was a state issue.

“There is no way that was taken out of context and his campaign’s claim that it was lost in translation is ridiculous because we were both speaking in English. He committed the cardinal sin of any career politician – He gave a straight answer to a straight question.”

Turner, Fox indicted

The Lee County Grand Jury last Friday returned indictments against two people, both charged with multiple counts.

Shelby E. Turner, 25 of KY 52 West is charged with fleeing or evading police in the first degree, receiving stolen property over $500 and under $10,000, wanton endangerment in the first degree and second degree persistent felony offender.

The indictment alleges that on April 22 of this year, Turner was operating a stolen vehicle when he fled from police and tried to hit a constable’s vehicle

Lee County Sheriff Wendell Childers was the witness before the grand jury.

Michael D. Fox, 37 of Dickson Hill Road is charged with possession of a handgun by a convicted felon, receiving stolen property (firearm) and persistent felony offender in the first degree.

Fox is alleged on May 27 of this year to have had a stolen handgun in his possession.

Sheriff Childers was the witness before the grand jury.

Vaccine-autism myth is starting to do harm

The Paducah Sun

Urban legends are ubiquitous these days, thanks in no small part to the Internet. There’s even an Internet website, Snopes.com, dedicated to unmasking them.

There’s the one about people dying of a combination of shrimp and vitamin C that is claimed to produce arsenic. There’s the one calling for bread-free zones in schools based on such ridiculous statistics as: 90 percent of violent crimes are committed within 24 hours of eating bread. And there’s the one about the energy drink containing a banned Vietnam-era, government-made compound that causes brain tumors.

All of these tales have been widely circulated on the Internet and all are utterly false. In many cases the harm done by such urban legends is minimal, and they are a source of amusement for those who are well-read and maintain a healthy dose of skepticism.

But such myths are not always harmless. A case in point: the story in the July 7 Paducah Sun about increasing numbers of local parents not vaccinating their children against serious childhood diseases because of discredited claims that childhood vaccinations can cause autism.

Dr. David Schell, a Paducah pediatrician who has been in practice for 31 years, says after years of parents routinely giving their children the recommended childhood vaccinations for diseases such as measles and pertussis (whooping cough) he is starting to see increasing numbers of parents who delay or opt out of the vaccinations.

It reflects a national trend, driven in large part by the Internet rumor of a vaccination-autism link. That has resulted in recent outbreaks of childhood diseases long thought eradicated.

Measles was considered wiped out in the United States in 2000. This year there have been 539 cases reported in 20 states, including an Ohio outbreak of 368 cases that led to 10 hospitalizations. Pertussis has become even more widespread, including an epidemic in California. That state recorded more than 4,500 cases including three infant deaths this year.

That is a bitter irony - that parents who may have avoided vaccinations due to a false rumor made decisions that led in at least three cases to preventable deaths of children.

No outbreaks of measles or pertussis have been reported in the Paducah region so far, but medical providers say that if the trend continues, it may just be a matter of time.

The vaccination rumor has its roots in a 1998 research paper that claimed to document a link between the MMR (measles, mumps and rubella) vaccine and autism. The paper was later retracted by 10 of the 12 researchers who authored it after it was learned that the lead author, British researcher Andrew Wakefield, faked his data. Wakefield ultimately had his British medical license revoked over the incident.

But the rumor lives on, and it produces cruel outcomes. In addition to the aforementioned preventable infant deaths there are the parents of autistic children who believe - some for a time, some to this day - that it was something they did, a decision they made, that caused their child to suffer the condition, when in fact it was mere genetic chance.

The moral, for those who have not already learned, is to treat any information on medical matters gained from the Internet with a large grain of salt. The best place for solid medical advice remains with your own doctors, who care about you and will do the best job of anyone in looking after your and your loved ones’ health.

What’s the Matter with “What’s the Matter with Eastern Kentucky?”

Feedback from the Smudge

By Anne Shelby

I first heard about it from my friend Jeanette. We were driving up Kentucky 11 from Clay County into Owsley, a rock cliff on one side of the road, the green South Fork of the Kentucky River on the other, on our way to Booneville to see a play. I’d been writing and not keeping up with current events.

That day’s online New York Times Magazine, she told me, had reported on a statistical study ranking every county in the United States. Clay County had come in last.

At first I felt sort of proud. I live in what the New York Times calls the hardest place to live in the United States. I’ve lived here for twenty years. My family has lived here for seven generations. We must be strong, resourceful and resilient. Or at least persistent.

depended more on statistics than on stereotypes, and that it took seriously the growing phenomenon of rural poverty.

Still, reading “What’s the Matter with Eastern Kentucky?” was hardly cringe-free.

I’ll let the title go.

I won’t say anything about the graphic, a Kentucky license plate that reads HELP ME.

I’ll ignore the crack about “drawls.”

And surely I don’t have to explain what’s wrong with referring to Appalachia and the Deep South as “the smudge of the country between New Orleans and Pittsburgh.”

Tim Marema, editor of The Daily Yonder, an online journal of the Center for Rural Strategies, concluded his response to the Lowery piece this way: “Remember, . . . rural folks are standing right here. You know we can hear you, right?”

Next morning I walked with the dogs down to the creek, past the barn my grandfather built, now collapsing into weathered boards and twisted metal, past his corn and tobacco fields, grown up in briars and sumac.

It’s a popular joke here: A man wins the lottery. Somebody asks him what he’ll do with the money. “I don’t know,” he says. “I guess I’ll just keep farming till it’s gone.”

While the dogs explore the woods, I sit on a rock beside the creek. Poplar and sycamore branches arc above me. A cool breeze wafts down out of the holler. Later I’ll pick blackberries for a cobbler, and fix a supper fresh from the garden.

If this is the hardest place to live in the United States, I thought, then I feel encouraged about the country as a whole.

I approached the article with caution.

We’ve grown skittish, here in Eastern Kentucky, about accounts of ourselves in the national media, having seen too many over the years that bore little or no resemblance to our actual lives. Writers about the region have been following the same pop-in, pop-out and pop-off pattern for about 150 years now, ever since the local colorists popped in just after the Civil War. And mountain people have been complaining about it just that long.

So I was relieved to find that Annie Lowery’s article, which appeared in the New York Times Magazine online June 26 and in print June 29,

Then there was this: “Clay County, in dead last, might as well be in a different country.”

It’s an old idea, Appalachia as separate and different from the rest of America, an idea most Clay Countians would find surprising, given our location, our history, our patriotism, and our economy, which has always risen and fallen with the national economy and with the vagaries of national corporations.

But what’s the matter with “What’s the Matter with Eastern Kentucky?” goes beyond occasional lapses into hyperbole and urban condescension.

Lowery reports on a study that compiled data by county in six categories: education, median income, life expectancy, rates of unemployment, disability and obesity. When each county’s numbers were averaged and the averages ranked, out of 3,135 counties, six in Eastern Kentucky – Lee, Leslie, Breathitt, Magoffin, Jackson and Clay – landed in the bottom ten. Clay County was #3,135. According to the data, 12.7% of Clay Countians are unemployed, 11.7% are disabled, 45% are obese. These are hard facts, not to be ignored.

But does the average of these six “data points” mean that Clay County is “the hardest place to live in the United States”?

Lowery does qualify the assertion: “Eastern Kentucky . . . might be the hardest place to live in the United States. Statistically speaking.” But these subtleties are lost in the rest of the story and in subsequent reports, some of which changed the Times’ term “hardest” to ““worst.”

Volumes could be – and have been – written, analyzing the complex reasons for Eastern Kentucky’s deep and persistent poverty. At least two book-length studies focus on the history of poverty in Clay County alone. Lowery’s attempt to cover the territory in 2000 words or less, while ambitious, was bound to be superficial.

Betsy Taylor, in “A Journalistic Selfie” in The Daily Yonder, accuses Lowery of ignoring history, cause and effect.

Author Silas House posted his response to “What’s the Matter with Eastern Kentucky?” on his blog, A Country Boy Can Surmise. The title: “The Matter Is You Don’t Know What You’re Talking About.”

The Times piece depends on statistics, not just to define the problem, but to solve it, too. The thing for us to do – and the government should help us do this, the story suggests – is to relocate to places with better numbers. We could, for example, head out to Los Alamos County, New Mexico, and get jobs in the nuclear weapons industry. Since Los Alamos County boasts the best statistics, it should, by the article’s logic, be the easiest place in the country to live.

Moving into a suburb of the nation’s capital might be nice. Six of those counties made it into the top ten.

Senator Rand Paul suggests Williston, North Dakota.

Meanwhile, in Eastern Kentucky and around the Appalachian region, a lot of people are working to try to change statistics like those reported in the Times. Here in Clay County, a local group called Stay in Clay is generating festivals, murals, walking trails, restoration projects, strategies for strengthening the local economy, and hope.

The play my friend and I went to see in Owsley County the day the Times story came out was HomeSong 2, a community play produced by local organizations, cast with local actors and musicians, and scripted from interviews with local residents. I helped with the script.

At 17th from the bottom in the Times’ ranking, Owsley County escaped notice this time. But after 2010 census figures showed that the tiny county had the nation’s lowest median household income, Owsley was branded “the poorest county in the United States,” and reporters have been popping in and out like Orville Redenbacher’s ever since.

One monologue from the play that night drew a spontaneous burst of applause. Here’s an excerpt:

“Maybe we need to come up with a different quality of life index for little country places like ours. How many points could we get for each hill? How much is a river worth? Can we add a category for walking on ground your ancestors walked? Or for the percentage of neighbors who’d show up in five minutes if you needed them, day or night? How can you measure that? And how can you measure how much you’d miss a place, if you had to leave?”

COLOR BLINDNESS IS NOT COLOR BLIND

Color vision deficiency (“color blindness”), an inherited trait, is much more common among boys than it is among girls since the red and green pigment genes involved in color vision are located on the X chromosome. Beyond that, recent research also reveals that color vision deficiency afflicts Caucasian boys at three times the rate of African-American boys. Among children between the ages of 37 and 72 months, 5.6% of Caucasian boys were “color blind” compared with 1.6% of African-American boys. In the same age group, Asian boys had the second highest percentage (3.1%), followed by Hispanic boys (2.6%). The overall prevalence of color vision deficiency is about 2% (59 boys and 4 girls out of the 4,005 children tested).

A different view

By Betty Crabtree

You know, there are some things WE can't fix, but we do know One who can. What God has promised He will do. Circumstances around us may not look like He answers our prayers, but hang on its not over yet.

When I say this I'm reminded of the garden I planted this year. When I planted the corn and beans and all the other stuff, I didn't get an instant crop to enjoy; I wait patiently till it bears its fruit. We're told in Hebrews 12:1 to endure, v.2 looking to Jesus the Author and finisher of our faith. And what is faith? Hebrews 11:1 tells us that faith is the substance (realization) of things hoped for, the evidence (confidence) of things not seen. 12:1....lay aside every weight (or hindrance) that so easily besets us. What is most people's hindrance? Usually impatience and unbelief, thinking that because the need isn't met immediately God doesn't hear or won't answer our prayers. Not so! The circumstances that affect us are usually hurtful and emotionally stressful, but endure, persevere, every day is a new day, it's not the same as yesterday. Don't let a root of bitterness spring up in you (12:15) because not only will you be a cranky, impatient, unhappy person but you will affect those around you. We all want to serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. V.28 So say this, Psalm 27:1 The Lord is my light and my salvation _whom shall I fear or dread? The Lord is the Refuge (Helper) and Stronghold of my life _of whom shall I be afraid? (Amplified Bible)

Hang in there dear readers, "It ain't over yet."

Beattyville Assembly Completes Week of VBS

Submitted by Allen Booth

"International Spy Academy: Agents for the One True God" was held at Beattyville Assembly of God this past week under the direction of Stacy Holley. Dinner was served each night at 5:30 to provide a service for parents. There was much excitement as children gathered for "Agents Assembly" each night at the opening and closing of the program. Each group rotated through four areas: "Headquarters," "Agent-in-Action Games," "Classified Crafts," and "Top Secret Snacks."

When children entered "Headquarters," they had to do a "hand scan" and punch in their "secret code." Each child was given a "passport" and "secret decoder." They could decode messages in their passport and other teaching material. Their "passport" was stamped each night of attendance. Areas of rotation had special messages.

Each night culminated with music, prizes, and a se-queled drama, International City. In the drama, children delighted to see what would happen to bumbling Inspector NoClue and how two young sleuths would save International City. Many decisions for Christ were made.

Keith Holley, Pastor, who wore many hats during the week, would like to thank all who made "International Spy Academy" a great success. He also would like to announce that Beattyville Assembly is beginning a new children's ministry each Sunday during Children's Church at 11:00 a.m.

Condemnation

We all stumble from time to time. So why is it when someone commits a sin we haven't, we somehow feel like we're above it and begin to cast stones? We're not above it, Paul warns us, and rather than condemn others for their mistakes, we should learn from them so that we don't make the same mistakes.

DO YOU NEED REPLACING

I would say we need to do and live in such a manner that we would be difficult to replace. You have heard people say they would be difficult to follow. I would say there are people in positions that it would be well if they were replaced.

Yes, there are some things that need to be replaced. There use has faded away. They are worn out – outdated.

I had a ministerial friend say there are methods (etc) in our church that need replacing. They have served their purpose and are outdated.

RETIRE

Some say I am not going to retire, I am going to get retreaded. That is a good addition.

Many things come in little to get retreaded that will help. Keeping a good and heathy diet, good exercise, relaxation and proper rest – keeping a positive mind.

Paul tells us in Phil. 4:8, "Finally...whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely. Whatsoever things are of a good report; if there be any praise think on these things."

REVIVE – RESURRECTION

Times we need to receive new inspiration – need to be revived.

There is a difference in being revived and being resurrected.

When a thing or one is dead it needs more than reviving it needs resurrecting.

Jesus was totally dead in the tomb – it took more than inspiration or reviving – it tood being resurrected.

One is dead in sins and trespasses it takes more than reviving it takes being resurrected to newness of live – being born again.

“Murder” from Front

He then sentenced him to two years, probated for five years.

“You tend to thrive on chaos and confusion,” Jones said, and asked if Williams had any questions.

“No, your honor,” said Williams.

Jones revoked the diversion of Tammy Overbee (no year given) after she admitted to having a DUI in August of last year.

Her attorney, Sarah Bryant, asked that the revocation be partial, and that her client be given credit for the 56 days she has already served.

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Kristen Clouse said she would not object to partial revocation.

Sentencing is set for August 15. Overbee faces up to five years.

Clarence James Sipple (1977) is to have a probation revocation hearing August 15. Probation and Parole says that Sipple violated the conditions of his probation by absconding and failing to pay court costs. He faces two years.

Verda Moore (1972) pled guilty to complicity to trafficking in a controlled substance in the first degree in one case and two counts of trafficking in the first in another case. She said she had soled three morphine pills in the complicity case and percocets in the other case. She faces five years. Sentencing is set for September 19.

Matthew R. Hager (1986) had his case continued until August 15 because his attorney could not be present. The charge is receiving stolen property under $10,000.

Jones made a docket note that Hager had his probation revoked in another case in Estill County, and was sentenced to five years.

A bench warrant was issued for Matthew Frost (1972). The Commonwealth had filed a motion for probation revocation.

A bench warrant was also issued for Amanda McIntosh (1985) for alleged diversion violation.

The case against Joyce E. Sparks (1978) was dismissed after successful completion of diversion.

A bench warrant was issued for Timothy Shoemaker (1985). Shoemaker owes $205.

Jones denied the motion for shock probation for Laura N. Osborne (1989).

A bench warrant was issued for David Shaw (1975). The charge is cultivating five or more marijuana plants. His attorney, Bryant, said she has not heard from him since March.

Marci K. Phillips (1982) passed a drug test. She was in court for a status hearing on the charges of robbery in the first degree and theft by unlawful taking.

Attorney Bruce Francisky asked to be released from representing Jerry Addison (1993), because he said he had a conflict. Addison is charged with robbery in the second degree and assault in the second degree.

Addison’s mother was present, and was crying. She said she did not know he was in trouble until recently.

Jones told her that Francisky had done a good job in representing her son, and that the Commonwealth is offering that he serve the minimum time. However, he said that Addison was facing serious charges.

Jones release Francisky, and set August 15 for review of a new attorney.

Teddy Love

By Avis Thompson

On April 21-22, 2014, Lee Co. KRTA Chapter, received honors. During the Annual KRTA State Banquet, Mrs. Madge Cockerhams Hand-Made Bear Quilt, was one of the Door Prizes entered in this year’s Silent Auction. Former Lee Countian, Linda Lou Stewart Ratti, was elated to be the winner of this Bear Quilt, especially after knowing the History behind its creation.

Pictured with the very popular, Teddy Love Bear are Madge Cockerham, Pres. Avis Thompson with Vice Pres., Geneva Duncil, and Linda Lou Stewart Ratti. A handwritten card written by Madge Cockerham, read as follows:

“This bear was made by Madge Cockerham, March 2014. It was made by me when I was 9 years old; as you know I didn’t quilt it, my mother did. The white blocks were made out of five pound sugar sacks which had to be bleached to get rid of the colored writing on them. I didn’t do a very good job on this one, but I am 85 years old and have Parkinson’s Disease. I hope you take this into consideration. I hope you enjoy. The pattern calls him, ‘Teddy Love’,

Sheltowee Trace turns 25

Submitted by Kimberly Morgan

The Sheltowee Trace was officially dedicated as part of the National Recreation Trail system in 1979. After 35 years, the trail remains as Kentucky’s longest distance trail, currently estimated at 307 miles.

“The Sheltowee Trace is a major tourist attraction for eastern Kentucky,” said Forest Supervisor Frank Beum, Daniel Boone National Forest.

“The trail takes visitors through some of the most scenic natural areas that you’ll find anywhere, and you can enjoy this spectacular scenery year round,” added Beum.

The trail is managed for multiple recreational uses, which include hiking, horseback riding, mountain biking and, in some designated sections, off-highway vehicles.

Steve Barbour, executive director of the Sheltowee Trace Association, a volunteer non-profit organization that helps maintain the trail, says the Trace has grown in prominence over the last few years. The trail is recognized both locally and nationally as a significant opportunity for outdoor recreation.

“The trail’s 35th anniversary is good reason to celebrate,” said Barbour. “The Sheltowee Trace helps support our local economies through tourism, luring thousands of outdoor enthusiasts each year to our forests and wilderness areas.”

The STA volunteers work to keep the trail clear of fallen trees, build stairs, bridges and other trail structures, install and maintain signs, and conduct other trail maintenance activities.

From north to south, the Sheltowee Trace stretches from Rowan County, Ky. to its southern terminus in Tennessee. All but about 28 miles of the trail occur in Kentucky.

The trail is named after Daniel Boone, who was given the name Sheltowee by Chief Blackfish of the Shawnee Tribe. In Shawnee, the name means “Big Turtle.”

The trail transects through portions of the Daniel Boone National Forest, Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area, Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, Natural Bridge State Resort Park, and along the shores of the Cumberland River, Cave Run Lake and Laurel River Lake.

KY 2016 in Lee County to be closed Saturday, July 26

In order to replace a drainage pipe, the Kentucky Department of Highways plans to close KY 2016 (Big Andy Ridge Road) in Lee County on Saturday July 26. The road will be closed at milepoint 3.3, just north of Cliffs Run Road. The project will begin around 8 a.m. and will continue until approximately 3 p.m. During this time, the road will be closed to all through traffic.

No marked detour will be posted, but drivers can use KY 715 and KY 11 through Wolfe County as a detour route. Motorists should plan their trips accordingly.

In case of inclement weather, the closure will be postponed until another suitable date.

Head Start

Middle Kentucky Head Start is over 90% enrolled for the 2014-2015 school year. The Family Service Workers will be enrolling from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Please call Lee County Head Start at 464-3329 or 464-3140 and talk to Beverly or Susan for more information.
